

Jason Foscolo has been a practicing attorney in the State of New York since 2002. He is the principal attorney of Jason Foscolo LLC, where he provides legal counsel to a rapidly growing client list of farmers and food entrepreneurs.

Jason served five years as a Judge Advocate in the United States Marine Corps. His time abroad gave him new insight and appreciation for the many different ways food can be produced, prepared, and enjoyed. After separating honorably from active duty in 2010, Jason pursued his passion for all-things edible by attending the University of Arkansas School of Law LL.M. Program in Agricultural and Food Law, the only program of its kind in the United States.

Jason is inspired by the innovators with whom he works, and is committed to helping them do business better. He currently resides in Southampton, New York with his wife, Lisa, and their omnivorous baby boy, Henry.

Food Safety Modernization Act Workshop

The Food Safety Modernization Act will have dramatic consequences for the farmers of Long Island. This workshop will describe the areas of agricultural production which the law will regulate, the exemptions available to East End farmers, and guidance on how farmers and consumers can still influence the final regulations that will ultimately be promulgated by the Food and Drug Administration under the Act.

Presented By: The Amagansett Food Institute

Amagansett Food Institute

AFI is a 501(c)(3) non-profit membership organization comprised of farmers and food producers on the East End of Long Island. AFI's mission is to support, promote, and advocate for the farmers, vintners, fishermen, and other food producers and providers. We strive to ensure that consumers enjoy safe, local food, and that local producers are supported in a thriving regional food system.
